

A&J Food Collections

Dough It Yourself - Lazy Pizza Bases That Slap

Let's talk pizza dough - proper, made-at-home, better-than-your-local dough. The kind that costs about $1.70 per large base but tastes like it should come with its own Italian soundtrack. Making it yourself? Absolutely worth it. Using a bread machine? Still worth it. It's called outsourcing to a countertop miracle. Because kneading by hand is for people with time and triceps.

Ingredients

- 570g Wallaby's Bread Flour - 12% protein is your minimum. 14%? Even better. 10%? Don't bother. - 340ml Water - Cold for bread machine. Lukewarm if mixing by hand. - 7g Yeast - One sachet. Want it thin and crisp? Skip it and live on the edge. - 30ml Olive Oil - Medium flavour works best. - Salt - A generous pinch. Not directly on yeast. - 1 tsp Wallaby Bread Improver - Gluten whisperer. Use it.

Method

1. Dump it all in the bread machine - Water, salt, oil, flour, bread improver, yeast. 2. Hit 'dough' mode. Scrape sides if needed. 3. Let it proof. Then shape. Then proof again. 4. No machine? Mix and knead by hand. Rest it somewhere warm for an hour.

Yield

- 1 family pizza - 2 large - 4 lunch-time heroes Cost: About $1.70 AUD per base. Taste: Like you robbed a woodfired pizzeria - ethically, of course.

Pro Tips

- Stretch, don't roll. - Use a mix of polenta and flour when shaping. - For puffier crusts, let it rise after shaping. - Don't overload the toppings - let the dough shine.

Final Word

Cooked once. Nailed it. Always repeated.

A&J Food Collections

This isn't just pizza dough - it's therapy. It's pride. It's the smell of 'I made this myself.' With the right flour, oil, and that gluten-boosting magic powder, you're not just making pizza - you're making statements.

Cooked once. Nailed it. Always repeated.